

Borrow a Pass, Discover Science! TWOSE and EPL Partnership Recognized with Provincial Award

EDMONTON, AB — September 24, 2026 — A partnership between TELUS World of Science – Edmonton (TWOSE) and Edmonton Public Library (EPL) is helping more Edmontonians explore the wonders of science with their library card.

The Science Access Pass project has been named the recipient of the Alberta Museums Association's (AMA) 2026 Leadership Award for Sustainability, recognizing its work to reduce financial barriers and make hands-on science experiences more accessible.

Through the partnership, Science Access Passes are available to borrow at five participating EPL branches serving communities facing socioeconomic barriers. Each pass can be borrowed for up to three weeks and provides free general admission to the Science Centre for up to six people, creating opportunities to discover, explore, and learn.

"Everyone deserves the chance to get curious, ask questions, and experience the joy of discovering something new," said Constance Scarlett, President & CEO, TELUS World of Science – Edmonton. "Working with Edmonton Public Library helps us bring that opportunity to more people in our community. This recognition celebrates what we can accomplish together when we make access a shared priority."

"Access to learning changes lives and strengthens communities," said Sharon Day, CEO, Edmonton Public Library. This award reflects the power of a shared vision between EPL and TELUS World of Science to create opportunities for everyone to discover what's possible."

The AMA's Leadership Award for Sustainability recognizes museums that build organizational vibrancy and integrate cultural, social, environmental, financial, and health and well-being considerations into their work. The Science Access Pass demonstrates how community partnerships can expand access to learning while supporting a more inclusive and connected community.
